A "GUTTER" IN TYPE.

Seven Lines Each Ending With the Word "the."

A short time ago a proofreader on newspaper reading some line copy caught sight of a remarkable "guiter." About to break it up by having a word deleted or inserted, he saw to his sur-prise, says Tit-Bits, that each of seven dines ended with the word "the." The paragraph was as follows:

Decidedly most efficacious of all would be such amendment to our Federal Constitu-tion as would permit the President of the United States to veto separate items of the rienne was to Napoleon, rather than what Carlyle was to Frederick the Great."

appropriation only without endangering the enactment of the laudable features of the measures. We do not underestimate the many difficulties in the way of securing the amendment suggested, but surely one of the kind is eminently desirable.
